Speker:

Michael Zuk- Chester Co Conservation District.
White Clay Water Quality

The conservation districts were created as a result of the dust bowls in the 1930's, which was caused by poor land and water management. Funding for their operations comes from boulder permit fees, and various government branches at the Federal, State, and county levels.

Water pollution comes from three main sources:

- Mining operations
- Animal feeding operations
- Stormwater runoff

The do projects that help reduce runoff into streams, creeks and rivers

Quote of the Week
